The app that brings neighbors together

Juliana Reis, a nurse who works in São Paulo, created an app that connects volunteers with elderly people who live alone. The idea came during the pandemic, when many older people, whose families lived far away, needed help with groceries and medicine.

The volunteers, who are mostly university students, receive training before their first visit. The neighborhood where the project started now has more than 400 participants.

"The thing that makes me happiest," says Juliana, "is seeing friendships which began with a simple delivery."
